We just cannot understand why the authorities are giving in to some opportunistic developers when there is an alternative to building houses under a flight path. Those developers must have known that the airport would be expanding, however, they are not going to live there, so what do they care?

There are sufficient areas where residential areas were already developed prior to flights over those areas increasing and the problems coming to a head. Wake up, leave those areas zoned rural and avoid a lot of problems from those residents as well as the residents of those areas that will probably be asked to share in the noise.
